Group of Erie Officials Included Among Former Marionites Forging to Front in Manhattan Area

Six Men Once Employed Here Now in Official Corps at Eastern Terminal

HEADED BY WOODRUFF

Former Local Residents Also Moving Up in Other Lines of Work Near Broadway

MEN and women who have won success or are on the road to that coveted goal in New York City and environs are no as a rule unknown to the metropolitan district according to facts gleaned from the Who's Who directory

Much to the contrary a pronounced majority of those prominent in various lines of activity in Manhattan are products of what many native New Yorkers are prone to style the province and sometimes the stick

In the list of those who have made substantial progress toward the golden goal in the territory surrounding Broadway Marion has a representation that compares favorably with any other city of this size in the country

Although there are no names in the Marion list that have reached the point where they are emblazoned in the bright lights or in the topmost newspaper headlines some in the local group have advanced far above the just ordinary class

In Erie Service

The Erie Railroad company's policy of recognizing ability and efficient service by promotion of its employes is responsible for several of the former Marionites having advanced to stations of importance and responsibility in New York and vicinity As a result of this policy six Erie men formerly connected with the company's forces in Marion are now occupying positions at the New York offices and Jersey City terminal ranging from the second highest office in the Erie's list down to yard master

The six are Robert I Woodruff vice president in charge of operations John M Condon assistant vice president in charge of operations Robert H Borkin superintendent of the terminal division Ray C Randall assistant superintendent of the terminal division Dan Cole terminal trainmaster in charge of coal operation at the New York terminal Richard S James yardmaster at the New York terminal

GERMAN SAYS DEBT AGREEMENT TO FAIL

Industrialist Claims Young Plan Demands Too Much from Country

BERLIN June 8—The Young plan will fail just as the Dawes plan failed because the tributes demanded of Germany far exceed Germany's capacity to pay Nothing has been done to enable Germany to increase her capacity to pay

This was the opinion expressed to International News Service today by Herr Alfred Hugenberg chairman of the National Peoples party and foremost industrial leader in Germany since the death of Hugo Stinnes As Herr Hugenberg's party is expected to lead the opposition in Germany against ratification of the Paris reparations agreement his views as expressed exclusively to International News Service embody the arguments which are expected to be advanced against ratification

The attempt, backed by the most prominent financial experts in America, to find a permanent solution of the reparation question has failed," Herr Hugenberg declared

"The Paris result which goes far beyond Owen D Youngs compromise proposal is no economic settlement based upon the demands of our creditors It is a political agreement based upon the demands of our creditors Their demands have been met almost completely"

Dresses as Flapper and Holds Up Young Men

CLEVELAND, June 8 — Jerry Stanhope is in the workhouse today for working what police say is an entirely new racket. Stanhope, police say, dressed as a flapper, lured several young men to a secluded spot on the east side and then turned strongarm man.

His victim, astonished by the unladylike conduct of their companion, are said by police to have yielded their ready money without delay.

Municipal Judge Oscar Bell fined Stanhope $25 and sentenced him to 30 days in the workhouse.

Harding High Sends Out Its Graduates With Their Diplomas at Pavilion

Seniors Told by Speaker They Must Learn To Measure Manpower by Future Fertility, Former Supt Mason Sends Flowers, Bowman Thanks Class

'We must learn to measure manpower' We can sell what we have and sell it quickly Because of this our tendency is to think of everything we have in terms of quick sale price You can't measure manpower on that basis You must measure manpower not by quick profits but by future fertility," were the thought breeding words of Dr Ralph W Sockman pastor of the Madison Avenue M E church of New York City in his address on 'Manpower vs Horsepower delivered before 193 graduates of Harding High school and a capacity audience last night at the Chautauqua pavilion

The commencement address followed the seating of the seniors to the marches The White Queen overture by Metra and American Youth March by Cauer played by the high school orchestra under the direction of J H Evans supervisor of music in the public schools and an introductory talk by George W Bowman superintendent of schools

Expresses Appreciation

In his short talk Mr Bowman expressed his deep appreciation to the class for its cooperation with him since the recent beginning of his service as superintendent here and extended his sincere congratulations to the class He said that an invitation had been extended Jesse H Mason superintendent of the Canton schools who formerly held that position here but that on account of an engagement in Canton Mr Mason could not attend

To express his gratitude for the invitation and to extend his best wishes Mr Mason sent a large basket of pink and white peonies tied with the class colors purple and gold to the class of '29 The flowers occupied the center of the stage which was decorated with other baskets of spring flowers

To emphasize the speed of travel these days Dr Sockman in opening his address pointed out his own quick trip from New York City here He talked of the speed of life that affects every calling into which the graduates may go

His talk, in part is given below

Modern Speed

'People today in the mad rush are caught in the swirl of life Women today are moving just as fast as men perhaps faster

Yet we wouldn't slow life if we could No one is trying to slow things down We will be able to travel faster in 20 years than we are today We can't stop it we must meet it

The civilization that moves at 60 miles an hour may be better than that which moves at 12 miles an hour but the civilization that moves at 60 miles may not be as safe

No individual or nation is safe unless forces of control match the force of drive was one of the thoughts Dr Sockman brought out most clearly in his talk

The task that we are trying to

* * *

GASTONIA N C June 8—More than two score persons were arrested early today in connection with the shooting of four police officers and a civilian during a night of disturbance at Loray mill here

The charge against the prisoners is "secret assault with intent to kill," but should Police Chief O F Adderholt, who was seriously wounded, die, the charges probably will be altered to murder, it was stated at headquarters

The four policemen and the civilian were wounded in a fusillade of shots which it was declared barked out of the hands of strikers and sympathizers during a mass meeting of Loray mill strikers.

The police stated that there probably would be additional arrests during the day. Those under arrest, it was stated were "found around the strikers' camp" The strikers have put up a tented city here.

Last night's disturbance was the first major disorder that had been reported in the Gastonia strike zone in several weeks. The situation had become so quiet that several companies of national guardsmen were withdrawn last month

State and municipal financing for the first four months this year stood at the lowest point for any similar period during the last five years according to a compilation by the Commercial & Financial Chronicle

New state and municipal bonds sold for the four months ending with April 1929 were reported at $85,888,888 as compared with $193,000,000 for the first four months of 1928

Production at Two Points Enables Local Concern To Handle Steadily Increasing Call for High Class Road and Building Material from Extensive Territory

The commercial production of sand and gravel in Marion is a comparatively new industry Sand and other gravel or crushed stone have always been necessary materials in the construction of buildings and permanent type highways but only in the last few years has it been possible to obtain all of these materials from a local producing source

A small amount of unwashed bank sand has been available from the same property now operated by the Marion Sand & Gravel Co west of the city but as the demand became greater and specifications more exacting this supply was found to be entirely inadequate Attempts were made by several companies to put the business on a commercial basis but not until the Marion Sand & Gravel Co took over the property in 1924 was there any marked headway made toward making Marion and adjacent territory independent of outside sources of these necessary building materials

Started in 1917

The present company took over the property in the spring of 1917 and started operation in a small way but due to government regulations incident to the war very little progress was made till after the armistice was signed in 1918 The following spring however a complete screening and washing plant was purchased and installed and for the first time Marion had its own source of sand and gravel available for any and all kinds of construction work

The constant changing and improving of state highway specifications and city building codes made it necessary for all producers of sand and gravel to improve their plants to keep in step with the times In fact nearly every year a small one major plant changes will annual success

In the world's sand and gravel industry it has developed into a process of skill where all problems of production were faced in laying their plans to turn out high grade concrete material if they hoped to remain in business

Kept Up With Times

The Marion Sand & Gravel Co kept in step with the times by improving its original plant for a number of years but in 1926 it decided that further changing would be poor economy so designed a new plant for the following season This plant was constructed during the winter of 1926 and 1927 and was first put in operation about the first of April of that year

This new plant incorporated not only the experience of several years study of the business from the standpoint of local market conditions but also of what other producers in the same field had done with the natural result that a strictly modern plant was added to the many successful industries in other lines already in Marion

After operating the new plant for two years the Marion Sand & Gravel Co felt the need of further capacity to supply its expanding markets so early this year it purchased the plant and business of the Richwood Gravel & Stone Co located on the Erie railroad at Richwood O and is operating this plant under the same name and management as the Marion company whose office is now located Suite 9 Citizens Building & Loan building

Thoroughly Equipped

Fortunately the deposit at the Richwood plant which is known as No 2 is largely gravel while the Marion deposit is largely sand so the two work together especially well The Marion Sand & Gravel Co with two modern plants in operation is now able to furnish the trade in its territory which includes all towns north to Fostoria south to Columbus east to Mansfield and west to Lima with strictly high grade sand and gravel which will meet the most exacting demands not only of the state highway department but of the building trade in general

Henry, The Much-Married

Will Rogers Completes His Review of the Latest Book on Life of Henry VIII, Who Wed Once Too Often

BY WILL ROGERS

All I know is just what I read in the papers. Last Sunday our lesson was Henry 8th the John Barrymore Jack Gilbert Musselman Hedda and John Kench Stratton all rolled into one. I told you about his first wife Catherine of Arragon Aragon translated from our old College days Latin meant somewhere in Spain. Well Henry got lost his taste for Catherine. He was trying to raise him a bunch of Boy babys and Catherine's inclination ran more to the effeminate.

Now we get Anne Boleyn Anne was the Great Garbo Peggy Joyce type. Catherine was a devout Catholic and didn't believe in divorce but Anne could regulate her religion and her morals to fit the situation. She just said If this big fat round faced Bird is going to start in on a series of promiscuous weddings why I better get in early while he is really in the amateur.

Were Not Modern

But wait a minute before we get to Anne we got to stop and do something for Mary Boelyn. Annes sister four years older. Mary had a husband named Carey but what a husband between friends. Henry gave him a job it says in the Court where he could see his own wife and Henry I dont know what job Mary had at the court but it was nothing trivial for her and Henry raise a baby Lets. Cares was still around there but Henry was the Head Man.

Now this comes in Anne was nineteen. Hen was 35 Catherine his wife was 41. Now who of the two will it? You said it.

Anne had already been stuck on a young Noble named Percy but he was kinder of the drugstore type. Then Cardinal Wookey who was really the William Borah of that administration. He was the one that King Henry kept promising that he would see that he would be made Pope at the next vacancy. Well Wookey had the backing of Hen but he lacked the vote of some 55 Cardinals. If it hadent been for that little oversight he might have been elected. Henry was for him on the platform of Divorce what Clement the Pope couldnt see any reason why Henry should have a spare wife when he already had one. But if Henry could make Wookey Pope he could have given him a Bill of Sale to go out and marry who and what he wanted. Why there is practically no telling who all Henry would have married.

Always Overbid

No woman would have been safe from becoming Queen of England. Wookey would go to Rome when a Pope would die with what Hen thought would be enough Doubloons to buy enough vote, but some other King from France or Spain would send in carry with more Doubloons and before poor old Wookey could communicate with Henry to make it other Campaign donation why the new Pope would be elected. Rather or even a good Bicycle would have been a godsend to Wookey in those trying hours. But it just looked like Wookey was a Democrat in a Republican administration so when Henry the 8th saw that Rome was going to veto his divorce bills who Henry and Wookey started a religion of their own.

It wasent exactly a free love religion But they would listen to reason in case some Gentleman run onto a younger Lady friend. Had Rome given Henry a divorce there would have been no Church of England. For Henry wasent particular about what religion it was all he wanted was Bigger and better Divorces. So this Anne Boleyn really should be their Patron Saint. She not only started a row but a Religion.

Anne Was Plenty Smart

Henry kinder suggested to Anne that there really dident have to be any marriage ceremony. But this Anne had seen where her sister Mary had lost when there had been no wedding bells. So she just kindly informed the old King that there would be a session with the Justice of the Peace before he started any of his funny business.

This Anne lived in 1520 just four hundred years ago but My she knew her Onions. She not only knew her Onions but her King. Henry started a couple of wars thinking maby they would attract some attention to him and his Country and make it look so important that Rome would have to listen to reason. That's when he issued that famous historic statement My Kingdom My Kingdom for a divorce. Anne stood pat and the Catholic church lost England which was of such little importance to them that it was about like Hoover losing Rhode Island. Martin Luther over in Germany was kinder lurking, for a minority religion at this time and I guess that's really about where Henry got his idea from. Luther dident want to get married again he just wanted to get free.

Anne Lost Her Head

Well when he got his own Court and made his own laws why of course he said that Catherine was not married to him. He had it annulled on the grounds that he had never seen Anne Boelyn when he married Catherine. Mistaken Identity. So he grabs off Anne, and leaves Catherine and his daughter Mary. marries Anne and in five months she has a baby and Its a Girl so he starts looking around again. This baby was Elizabeth. That we are later to hear so much of. What happened to Anne? The Ax What had she done. Nothing. but Henry had run onto Jane Seymour and in the meantime Catherine had died of a broken heart so his batting average was not two defeated two.

Here is what Anne Boelyn said of. I heard say the Executioner is very good and I have a little neck. That night Henry gave a big party he had found a better way than to divorce 'em. He married Jane who didnt have much to recommend her outside of just being of the female gender. Well they had not any more than got home from the church till they had a baby and it was a boy and she died at once which was fortunate for her for he was already in communication with Germany to import a new wife from over there. Her name was Anne of Cleves. His Ministers had picked her from a Holbein Portrait so they brought her over and I will say one thing for 11 Hours he had no conscience but he did have judgment.

Very Poor Picture

He went to the docks to meet Anne from Germany and got one flash at her and chopped off Cromwells head for being such a bad Judge of beauty. But it looked like it would strengthen the Kingdom with Europe if he married her so he shut his eyes and went at it. She had been what the Japanese call a Picture bride all they see is the picture but Holbein was a painter not a camera. If Cameras had been in use it would have saved Henry that marriage One snap shot with a No. 2 Brownie of her would have kept her right at home she had a lot of breeding but no class. She was a Princess of year old She made up in virtue what she lacked in charm. Well Henry had never been very high on virtue what he wanted was beauty and How! The only English word she could say was Ja Ja and I dont know what that was. Neither do I.

Cromwell said "Yes me Lord but she hath a Queenly manner." Hen" was cracked back. Well she dont need it to protect her. She missed beheading by him divorcing her and sending her home.

Now we get Katheryn Howard a cousin of Anne Boelyns. She went to the block with these kind words I die Queen of England but I would rather die the wife of a Culpepper. (I wonder if he was any relation to the Virginia Culpeppers who owned a Court House). Well that dident make Henry feel any too good to know that he wasent in as good favor as Culpepper so he just hunted up Culpepper and left with his head. Oh what a cheerful successor our folks that come over on the Mayflower had in this Gentleman Henry.

Well he was death on Katherines. He gets another one only they all spell their name different.

Part One Too Many

This last one is Katherine Parr. She was a motherly kind of a soul and they do say (and all hope it was true) that she poisoned him any how she sent him to the Ax. She had been married twice before and you got to learn something in that time. Course Henry had her Sic to three but her and that English Grit bumped him off before he could get her. She buried him and then married the man of her choice which was No. 1 for her. And then we say. What's our Country coming too we are getting worse and worse.

Well it looks to me the only safe man in those days was the Ax man. So I just want to meet some Colonial Dame now that likes to claim she can trace her ancestors back to the Tudors. But dont miss Henry the 8th by Hackett. They say its the best written book of this Generation. Its the best one I ever read next to the Illiterate Digest and my own one running out called I Ether and Me.

HITS FRENCH LAW

Senator Shortridge Condemns Order on Motion Pictures

WASHINGTON, June 5—The 1 to 1 motion picture import law of France was condemned in the senate yesterday afternoon by Senator Shortridge Republican of California.

He declared the law under which American producers must purchase one French film for every four American films sold in France was harmful, unwise and perhaps dangerous. He declared the American films were particularly popular in France but that French films had no market in America.

Senator King Democrat of Utah however defended the French practices, saying it was more moral than the American high tariff wall which acted as an embargo against any imports to America.

It Destroys Life

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. JAMES W. SCHILLINGER
Pastor, Emanuel's Lutheran Church.

A WOMAN, professing to love Christ more than the world, clad in a silk dress costing $100, making up and trimming of the same $50, hat, or apology for one, $50, coat $500, diamond ring $800, other jewelry $300, total $1500—all hung upon one frail, dying worm, attended a meeting of women, in behalf of the homeless children of the slums. When the sufferings of the poor children were related, she wept, and wiped her nose on an expensive, embroidered handkerchief. When the contributions were gathered, she opened a well filled, beautiful purse of costly workmanship, and gave 25 cents to relieve the sufferings of the poor children.

The curse of the world, and of the church, is covetousness. Covetousness means the love of the things of this world. It assumes various forms, depending upon the person's disposition. One loves the things of the world, in order to hoard them; he is a miser. Another loves them, in order to lavish them upon the lusts of his flesh; he is a prodigal. Both are entangled in the deadly meshes of covetousness.

Says the great apostle: "Covetousness is the root of all evil." It destroys love, the only really good thing in this world. It destroys a man's true love for his brethren. The covetous man will devour his brethren. It destroys all true love for God. The covetous man's god is Mammon; he serves him with all his strength. It destroys a man's true love for his own soul. Covetousness blights the soul, dries it up and destroys all hopes of eternity.

"Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee," is God's final verdict upon the slave of covetousness.

Taking the Marion section of the New York directory as a whole how ever the group of Erie officials originating here is perhaps the most noteworthy feature There are a number of interesting and unusual circumstances connected with these men and the chain of developments which led them to the railroad's main headquarters in the east

Robert E Woodruff, now the second highest official in the Erie system as the result of his advancement on June 1 to the post of vice president in charge of operations started out in the company as a section hand He entire railroad experience has been with the Erie and he knows the business from the ground up He lived in Marion approximately five years while filling the office of division superintendent

At that time John M Condon was employed here as general yardmaster Later he left the Erie employ and engaged in railroad work in California approximately two years again becoming a member of the Erie force at the end of that time Advancement came steadily from then on eventually leading to his appointment as superintendent of the terminal division at Jersey City and then advancement to the position of general manager of the eastern district He was filling that position when promoted to the office of assistant vice president on June 1

Both Woodruff and Condon now have their headquarters in the main Erie offices on Church st New York City The other former Marionites have their offices at the Jersey City terminal

Start As Clerks

While Condon was employed as yardmaster in Marion he hired Ray C Randall and Dano Cole as yard clerks When Condon went to Jersey City he took Cole with him as a yardmaster As the result of promotions Cole is now terminal trainmaster at Edgewater N J and has supervision over coal operations in the New York terminal

After Condon left Marion Randall became general yardmaster here and was later transferred to the same position at Hammond Ind From there he was promoted to trainmaster and assistant superintendent at Chicago and about a year ago was advanced to assistant superintendent of the terminal division at Jersey City

Robert H Borkus formerly division engineer of the Erie with headquarters in Marion is now superintendent of the terminal division at Jersey City Borkus's service with the Erie while a resident of Marion was during the time of W I Englis as superintendent of the local division

The sixth former Marion man at the New York Terminal of the Erie is Richard S James who served as yardmaster here several years ago His appointment to the position of yardmaster at the eastern terminal came as a promotion

All of these former Marion men have advanced solely on their merits and efficiency in service other Erie officials say and it is generally predicted that the future is certain to carry them to still higher stations

ress is to develop the forces of control to match those of the drive and make the manpower of America able to match the force power of the nation

Mechanical Skill Dazzling

We must pay attention to man power today as we are paying attention to horsepower America's mechanical skill dazzles the world That is what has happened We are just a little better at building skyscraper buildings than we are at building skyscraper children

Society is not able to go the pace it does without friction We all know that lawlessness is the most pertinent problem we face Our lawlessness is not due to the passing of the prohibition law The enforcement of the eighteenth amendment reveals a heart weakening of the law

Remember The home and school and church cannot expect legislation and courts to move the wildness which the home school and church have failed to control It is putting entirely too big a burden on public institutions because private institutions are failing to enforce the laws

In the transition from country to city life we are thinking too much about market pages We are a hot house generation trying to force the seeds Young people are trying to get thrills in their teens that used to be gotten in middle age Business men of 40 and 50 are unhappy if they do not get financial and social positions

Youth Shortened

We are shortening normal childhood and lengthening second childhood We have premature young people with shortened young lives

America's difficulties are a kind of awkwardness We have fine impulses and high ideals but we want to move up without having training We need local drilling in Christian character

There is danger that in this easily carried population we are forgetting to settle down in localities Settle down! Settle down that the Christian character may be retained

The young people in this graduating class have the power to build a finer manpower a more Christian life than our forefathers ever dreamed of

Dr Sockman enlivened his interesting and short address with humorous stories He was born in Mt Vernon O and received much of his college education in Ohio Wesleyan university

The Rev H J Williamson pastor of Oakland Evangelical church and father of twin daughters in the graduating class offered the invocation and benediction

F C Gegenheimer president of the school board gave a short talk in which he showed that the class of 29 proved statistics that 60 per cent of each class that starts through school graduates at the end of 12 years study

Diplomas Presented

K B Marshall principal of the high school called the graduates to the platform where they received their diplomas from Mr Gegenheimer together with a yellow rose their class flower When the seniors had taken their places on the platform they sang their class song for the last time together

The audience joined with singing of The Star Spangled Banner closing the commencement program

During the program the Girls Glee club of the high school sang two numbers Night Song by Ira B Wilson and The Old Refrain by Kreisler

This action has been officially sanctioned by Mayor Emery Murphy and the council franchise committee after investigating the matter

One Fair Sunday Finally Forecast

Marionites will be pleased to learn that the official weather forecaster has condescended to give them one Sunday of fair weather, somewhat warmer than today's temperature If his prediction is fulfilled one may safely plan a picnic, fishing trip, game of golf or other week-end recreation that requires fair weather.

Yesterday and a year ago were very similar in high and low weather reports. Yesterday, the high stood at 72, a year ago 71 was recorded Last night's low stood at 52, a year ago 53.

LAW COMMISSION MEETS ROUGH GOING

Finds Investigation of American Lawlessness Difficult, Takes Recess

WASHINGTON June 8—President Hoover's law enforcement commission is encountering rough going in its quest of the causes and cure of American lawlessness

This much was candidly admitted today by former Attorney General George W Wickersham the chairman After numerous meetings with the committee and consultations with cabinet officers he described the task set out by President Hoover as baffling and perplexing and ordered another 10 days recess so the commission can get together enough data to make a start

No one can realize he said who has not looked into the question close by just how baffling it is

The principal difficulty, the chairman said is the lack of reliable statistics on the crime situation in the United States There is plenty of crime but few authoritative figures

Can it be that the $750,000,000 annual increase in the wealth of Canada since 1921 represents the profit, from America's purchases of her liquid delight?

Count Maxence Pumma Marie Joseph Michel de Polignac, of France, has been arrested in New York City on the theory that he is the head of the biggest rum-running organization operating exclusively for the trade of Park and Fifth avenues. There's no telling to what extremities a man will go who has to support a name like that.

Our idea of a real news item would be announcement from Washington that congress had voted a fund of $500,000,000 for the aid and benefit of us hard-working spreaders of fly and sunshine in paragraphs.

The jury was unable to agree in the trial of James M. Crowe, one of the three Volstead-law enforcers charged with killing the seventeen-year-old college student, J. W. Kendrick, near Abingdon, Virginia. As eighteen shots were fired at him, it's easy to see that any jury might experience difficulty in deciding which member of the trio fired the fatal shot.

The reference in these columns, yesterday, to the class graduated last night as the largest in the history of the Marion High school was not in accord with fact. The type should have read "one of the largest."

It is announced that the per capita wealth of Canada is $2,842, her national wealth, exclusive of natural resources, being placed at $26,691,482,000, which means an increase of $3,500,000,000 since 1923, or $750,000,000 annually. The first thing Canada knows, Europe will be hating her also for her prosperity.

The grand jury, which has been sitting up in Kenosha, Wisconsin, has reported that contempt for law and government has hamstrung its investigation by placing so many obstacles in its way that it has not been able to clear up twenty-two bombings and many other crimes committed in the county recently. Little wonder that the Allen A mills, from which plant 300 men are "out," has purchased a big plant up in Canada.

The Rising Cost of Government.

Some amazing figures were given out in Columbus, this week, gleaned from the report of a survey made by the Ohio chamber of commerce.

We were prepared for the information that taxes on the steam railroads in 1928 amounted to $2,961,706 and that the electric roads of the state paid taxes aggregating $674,000. We were not surprised to learn that $836,880 represented seventy-five per cent. of the cigaret taxes collected, the remaining twenty-five per cent. going to the federal government. We realized that the taxes paid by domestic corporations and insurance companies were large, and hence passed over with a glance that their tax expenditures were $6 319,000 and $5,513,311, respectively. We noted with indifference that universities and colleges paid $2,311,525 taxes on their properties but there was some surprise for us in that $571,250 had been paid in as a result of the new hunters' law and that offenses against the prohibition law had resulted in payments to the state aggregating $586,217.

But, frankly, the statement that there was collected in Ohio general property taxes in 1928 an aggregate of $333,289,172 was a matter for amazement.

We do not know what the assessed valuation of property subject to general property taxes was in 1928. We haven't the figures at hand. But in 1926 it was $12 679,777,000. That the people should pay out taxes on this valuation, or one probably somewhat larger, to the amount of $333,289,172, which does not include delinquent taxes, and the various special taxes they are forced to bear, for government—state, county, township and municipal—was almost beyond belief.

The sum of $333,289,172 for government, and not overly good government at that! Why, that is but something like $500 000 less than the ordinary receipts and something like $60,000,000 more than the entire ordinary expenditures of the United States government fifty years ago! And over four times what the people of Ohio paid out for taxes nineteen years ago, the figures for 1910 having been $75,819,795!

How much longer will the people of Ohio, and those of practically all the states of the union for that matter, be able to stand this awful rising cost of government?

For Census and Reapportionment.

Unless the wholly unexpected happens, the combined census and congressional reapportionment bill will be approved by the two houses of congress, next week, in the form in which it will come out from conference, and the legislative branch of the government may no longer be charged with persevering in the most notable defiance of the constitution in our history, to which it has been subject for the past eight years. It is said that the president will affix his signature, and thus the taking of the 1930 decennial census and reapportionment of the membership of the lower house of congress are as good as assured.

For a time this week the fate of the bill was in doubt as the result of two amendments passed by the house. One amendment would have excluded aliens from the census upon which house reapportionment is based, which would have been a blow to the cities, in which they are very largely congregated. The other would have excluded from the count on which to base congressional reapportionment all persons of age and eligible to vote who have been denied the right of suffrage. This would have hit the South, where the negroes are as good as disfranchised. The very ticklish situation resulting from the passing of these amendments was broken, Thursday, when Majority Floor Leader Tilson offered an amendment wiping out the entire section carrying the two amendments responsible for the legislative jam, which was passed by a vote of 272 to 105.

The expected results of the bill will be to make the cities and the villages of 2,500 or more inhabitants predominant in the election of members of the house, putting them in control of that body for the first time in its history by giving the great cities and industrial centers more congressmen and reducing the number from the rural districts. It is also figured that it will probably increase the number of "wet" congressmen, but this is a matter yet subject to some doubt. It will probably add five or six more to the electoral vote of the Republican party, as the electoral vote is based on the number of congressmen, and the greatest gain in congressional strength will be in states normally Republican and the chief losses sustained by states normally Democratic.

However, no matter what the results may be; no matter whether the law may work to the advantage of urban or rural representation, whether it add strength to wets or drys, or increase the Republican or Democratic electoral vote, its enactment is in conformity to the basic law of the land by which we as a people must be guided and to which we must conform if law is to survive in the land. And by far the most important phase of the matter is that it removes the spectacle of the legislative branch appearing year after year in the attitude of defiance to the law under which and solely by means of which it has its being—a standing reproach to our form of government and to us as a people and an encouragement to defiance by the citizenship of the country of all law. As asked in these columns some days ago: "If the congress of the United States defies the law, how can the people for whom it makes laws be expected to obey them?"

Speaking of farm life in his latest magazine article, former President Coolidge says: "If it did not afford me the best there was, it abundantly provided the best that there was for me." Pause a moment; and give this gem of truth a bit of thought.

Berlin announces that a wage boost equivalent to $12,000 000 in our money has averted a threatened strike of German railroad workers, which may be taken as a pretty good indication that German industrial conditions are showing improvement.

The young radio operator, arrested at sea on the Admiral Benson on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of a Los Angeles woman, was not aboard when that vessel docked in San Francisco, and investigation revealed that he had escaped from the stateroom in which he was locked by unscrewing the lock with a piece of iron taken from a radiator. His action is hardly in accord with his protestations of innocence.

A young German scientist has been awarded by the French Astronomical society the annual cash prize of 10,000 francs for the best plan for a flight to the moon—a plane, utilizing hydrogen and alcohol for fuel, giving it a theoretical speed of 13,120 feet a second to carry it beyond the bounds of terrestrial lords. As he doesn't have to demonstrate the thing getting money like that looks like a regular snap.

The government has altered its regulations for licensing planes to speed the selling of them on the installment plan. A word to the wise should be sufficient. Let there be no home without a plane proof sub-cellar with an exit therefrom for use in case fire results from a crash.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, United States senator and contributor to this page, smashed the proposition a bit, from the advice of Professor Rogers, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and told the graduates of Davis and Elkins college: "Don't be a snob. Don't try to marry the boss' daughter. God bless you if you are lucky enough to marry his stenographer." That man Rogers certainly hit a real fountain of publicity.

No sooner had Ambassador Esme Howard announced that he would sign no more requests for permission to import liquor for the British embassy in Washington than a mean-spirited writer bobs up with the intimation that the ambassador figured that the stock on hand will suffice for embassy needs up to the time he is superseded by the appointee of the new Labor government. Virtues are seldom recognized as they should be in this day and age.

MAKING IT A DIFFICULT PORT.

Forms of Exercise.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Several weeks ago I called on the president at the White House. This was just a few days after the inauguration and in the period when he had many vexing problems to settle.

I was disturbed. I found his office hot as an oven. It was stifling in its lack of fresh air.

When I protested the president laughed, but jumped me immediately to open the window. On my official visits to the White House since then I have found his office cool, well ventilated and a suitable place to house the chief executive.

Because the alert newspaper men gave publicity to my first visit they have been eager to inquire each time I am at the White House what I think of the president's health. As a matter of fact, he looks very well indeed.

He is fortunate in having a very sensible physician, Dr. Joel T. Boone, a medical officer of the navy. This wise man keeps a watchful eye on the president. I am glad of it because when unusual exercises are taken, particularly those of a violent nature, it is important to know the condition of the heart, lungs and other organs. For instance, so violent a form of exercise as "medicine ball," indulged in by the president, should not be undertaken by a person past middle life unless the vital organs, including the blood vessels, are in prime condition.

That is the thought I have in mind today. We are living in a period when thousands of our citizens are seeking to take off flesh.

Modern life is conducive to increased weight. City dwellers particularly have so many things done for them that they do not exercise as their ancestors did. This fact added to the further truth that many present-day foods are fattening makes it almost inevitable that fat should accumulate.

I sometimes think we lack character when we permit our conditions of life to do us harm rather than good. I am glad I live in these times and I know you are.

But we must not permit softness and needless self-indulgence to mar our figures and shorten our lives. We may not be particularly concerned about how we look but my observation is that the average person does not wish to die before his time.

Once in a while therefore, a suddenly aroused person will jump into the most violent exercises and wicked restriction of food. Please don't yield to the impulse to do these things until you have talked with your doctor. He is qualified to advise whether you can safely do the things you have in mind.

I am glad the president recognized this fact. Under the eye of his physician he has taken off fifteen or twenty pounds and has done it in a way pleasing to him. My suggestion to you is that you have your physician, as the president did, tell you what to do.

WANTED: AMERICANS!

The cryingest need in the United States today is for more Americans. This fact has never been made more evident than by the spectacle of groups in both houses of congress attempting to trample the constitution under foot in a mad struggle for special privileges for their own states, whatever the consequences may be to the rest of the union.

The country has people enough. What it is short on is men and women big enough to realize that the good of the whole is of more importance than that of any of its parts, albeit those parts are their own constituencies. The champions of special privileges for this section or that class doubtless will be highly offended to be told that they are not Americans. Weren't they born in this country? Aren't they citizens of it? Wouldn't they fight for it if war came and they were conscripted?

Americans whose patriotism is so sporadic, with respect to time as well as to place, are Americans only in name. They are not Americans in fact or feeling. They lack the essential quality of Americanism, which is the ability to see that the great socio-political experiment going on in this country can not succeed unless the citizenry is as patriotic in peace as it is in war. They are like the man who, asked at the border if he resided in this country, answered in the negative and then proudly announced he hailed from Arkansas.

Washington foresaw this very thing and warned his countrymen against it, when he decried the exaltation of local appellations above the name American, which belonged to them in their national capacity. This warning has been too little heeded. Wherever he turns today, whatever walk of life he enters, a thoughtful American is painfully impressed by the relatively negligible number of his fellow-citizens capable of envisaging the United States as a whole, what its destiny is and what is necessary to enable it to reach its appointed goal.

The number of those who are willing to fight for their state, county or city is legion. There are their treasures. They are lost in the more remote field of national necessities. They lack the stature to see over the wall that surrounds their personal interests. The vast extent of the country and the complexity of its problems doubtless does present a large eyeful for the ordinary citizen; but those who rise to high office, where they obtain a broad and all-embracing view of the national scenery, should be able to grasp the importance of not adding to the strains already imposed upon the constitution, another obvilence of the fundamental principles upon which not only that document, but the American system of government are based.—Detroit Free Press.

PASS THE FARM BILL!

The conferees of the senate and the house have finally reached an agreement on the farm relief bill. By a vote of eight to two the conference committee has determined to eliminate the debenture clause from the measure. This clause has been the great stumbling block in the way of farm legislation at this time. Politics was at the base of the movement which brought about its adoption in the senate. It remains to be seen whether politics rather than the interests of the farmer will prevail in the end. The house and President Hoover have stood strongly against the debenture proposition. The conference report on the farm bill goes, under the parliamentary situation, to the house today. Its adoption there is confidently predicted

When the conference report is submitted to the senate there will remain only one step to bring about the enactment of farm legislation. That is for the senate to accept the conference report. No doubt exists that the president will sign the bill if it is sent to him in its conference form. Will the senate for partisan political purposes block this legislation? If it does the farmers will get no legislation and the purpose for which the congress was called into special session will have been nullified.

Ever since the deflation which followed after the close of the World war, the American farmers have demanded some measure of relief from the government. Bit by bit, legislation has been enacted to aid them, but no great basic agricultural law has so far been put through. Many attempts have been made to do so. Unsound and unworkable remedies have been attached to bills for farm relief, just such as the debenture clause, and have prevented final action on these measures in the past. The pending bill proposes to set up a federal farm board with wide powers to aid the farmers.

It provides a revolving fund of $500,000,000 to be used for the more orderly marketing of farm crops, the real sore spot so far as the farmers are concerned. It does not seem possible that any combination in the senate will care to bear the odium of preventing the final passage of this farm relief legislation. It is does, the members of this combination must answer to the farmers in the final analysis. The country would like to see a start made along the lines laid down in the farm bill. If additional legislation is required, it may be put through later, but the common sense thing to do now is to pass this bill and make a beginning.—Washington Star, June 6.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 8—Many beautiful young girls in New York to all appearances take the easiest way, but are, as a matter of fact "good girls." While they skate dangerously on thin ice they are not ostracized chiefly because of the looseness of metropolitan conventions.

To the world they appear to be old man's darlings, but are in some instances merely companions, and appease the ache of loneliness that so frequently comes to rich and aged widowers and bachelors. The attachments are purely platonic. Ladies must live, and the lonely must have companionship.

In exchange for their companionate service many girls are on salaries as fixed as those of stenographers and private secretaries. They go out to dinner, the play or opera whenever invited and the rest of the time is their own without restrictions.

Indeed, some are in love with other men and often marry them. Such attachments are peculiar to large centers where congestion paradoxically creates isolation. Elderly men in New York are not able to form the friendly contacts of smaller communities.

The rich old gazabo is not without his vanity. He not only enjoys sparring about the beautiful, well-dressed and cultured girl, but he is flattered by being seen in her company. And there are enough cultured girls of this sort who do not care a fig for conventions.

There is one dodderer of a Fifth avenue club whose private pay roll includes three girls of this sort. He takes one out for the evening one week and another the next, and so on. Each knows about the other, and the arrangement is strictly a commercial one.

This indulgence is said to cost him $30,000 a year—a $10,000 salary for each. For many years a millionaire widower has escorted a talented actress to gay gatherings. He has no thought of marriage, nor has she. They are rare friends. She receives $20,000 annually, and will share in his estate.

A few blocks eastward from Park avenue is a collegiate speakeasy that is a high spot for campus cutups destined to miss chapel the morning after. It is an old house, and there is a room lined with Heidelberg steins. Slap a collegiate with a bar towel or give him two beers and he'll fidget if he can not sing a drinking song and beat a tankard against a table top. Over the bar are pennants from all over, and bartenders exhibit a neat collection of pledged frat pins. The manager is a college man and interviews all the unknowns before admitting them. Two uke strummers sing boola boola songs to heighten the "atmosphere."

* * *

Speakeasy back rooms these days resemble the saloon back room of other days. There is the sallow, shirt-sleeved piano player with the eternal cigaret drooping from loose lips, and those buxom blondes who sing tear-jerking melodies so touching in mawkish sentimentalities. There is sawdust on the floor, the odor of stale drinks and the hanging haze of cigaret-smoke. To heighten the ancient cameo, a con drifts in now and then, has his dram behind the door, and moseys away.

* * *

The "Frankie and Johnny" song is still a favorite of the speakeasy back room. No one seems to know just how many verses there are to the jovial and ribald ditty. But one singer in west Forty-Eighth street is able to sing 137 verses. And that, no matter how sloshed you are, is almost enough.

* * *

A fellow from home writes: "Your efforts at metropolitan sophistication are amusing to those of us who saw you turn pale the day you walked under the first electric fan in Kerr's drug store."

Nothing of the sort. I've always been air conscious.

The electric auto sign across the Broadway frontage of the Claridge hotel pays $60,000 a year rental. The tooth paste ad with so many slogans, at the head of Times square pays $110,000 a year. High lights, as it were.

Why the Earth Is Round.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The question is often asked: "Why are the heavenly bodies, the sun, the moon and the planets, round like balls? What proves the earth, for instance, from being flat?" The answer that they pull themselves into that shape with their own gravity is not always accepted without a doubtful shake of the head by those who are little learned in physics. The answer is particularly unpopular with the "earth-flatteners" because if it is correct—and it is—it doesn't give the flat-earth theory even a leg to stand on. It says, in effect: "If you could make the earth flat, it wouldn't stay so. It would crumple up and roll itself into a sphere as quickly as a scared hedgehog."

This all results from the law of gravitation—the law, or principle, of nature that causes every particle of matter to attract every other particle with a force which is directly proportional to the mass of the particles and inversely proportional to the square of the distances between them.

This means that you can never separate a mass of matter into particles so small that they do not continue to attract one another, and that you can not separate the particles so far that they lost all attraction for one another, although the attraction falls off so rapidly that it may be unnoticed at great distances. It appears to mean also that, though gravitation behaves like radiant energy, such as light, heat, etc., it can not be screened off as they can. The moon can not hide away from the gravitation of the sun by getting behind the earth. It can hide from the sun's light, but not from its pull. The sun pulls upon the moon right through the earth just as if the earth were not there. But it does not pull the moon down upon the earth because it is at the same time pulling the earth away from the moon, with a force proportional to the difference of its attraction upon the earth—which is then the nearer—and upon the moon—which is then the farther.

In like manner, the vast ball of matter that constitutes the globe of the earth does not cut off the gravitation between the earth's center and its surface. Every particle in the whole earth freely exercises the full force that its mass gives it upon every other particle anywhere in the globe, the only variation being that due to distance.

Now, if you ponder a little on this, you will see, I think, why a great mass of matter like the earth must necessarily draw itself into a spherical shape. It is only when the particles are arranged in that shape that they all have equal reaction upon one another. The distance from the center to the surface is the same in all directions, and all the particles are pulled toward the center. When arranged in the form of a sphere they are in equilibrium.

Dr. William Bowie has picturesquely stated that "the material of the earth is not strong enough to maintain any other form than that of a spheroid. If the earth were compressed into a cubical form and the forces that held it so were suddenly released, there would be a collapse which would bring the earth's surface very close to the spherical form, and this would occur almost instantaneously. The earth has been found to have a rigidity equal to that of steel, but even a steel cube as large as the earth could not withstand the gravitational forces that tend to pull all particles toward its center."

Mark the words "as large as the earth." They mean that a relatively small mass of matter, if sufficiently rigid, could retain some other shape notwithstanding the gravitation of its particles. Thus we find that the masses of meteoric iron that sometimes fall upon the earth are irregular in shape, because the aggregate attractive force of the matter composing them is not great enough to compel all of their particles to assume the position of equilibrium found only in the sphere. It appears that some of the asteroids even are irregular in form, doubtless because of their small size and mass. Some are not more than twenty miles in diameter.

The earth and the other planets all depart more or less from a true spherical shape because of the centrifugal force arising from their rotation on their axes. But calculation under the gravitation law completely explains this.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The science of weather forecasting is one of the most important and interesting of man's activities. It is said that the early weather forecasting service was set up in France as the result of a destructive storm in 1854. Today millions read the weather forecast, base their business on it, rely on it, make or lose money on it, depend upon it for a considerable share of their happiness. We joke about the weather bureau and the weather man, but it is one of the most serious businesses in the world. It is capable of great development. Constantly we are learning more about forecasting. Before many years the science will have become a great deal more exact than it is today.

No church subject so appeals to the human mind as the subject of church unity. Churches of various denominations, overlapping each other's territory, are out of place in a world which grows more efficient. Canada some time ago arrested the attention of the world with the formation of its United church. And yet there is much distance to go in Canada. About 900 churches of one of the denominations concerned in the merger failed to join.

It is said that the ration of productiveness between a worker in America and a worker in England is the ratio between $3,750 and $1,500. Another authority says that seven American workmen are the equal of ten British workmen. The British workingman is likely to be a beer drinker while the average American worker is not. One wonders what part prohibition plays in productiveness.

Cukes and Vitamines

THE much slandered cucumber which in days gone by was eaten by those who have long been gathered to their fathers much as some folks of today take a drink — eaten and then a sitting down to wait for the worst to happen has at last come into its own It is catalogued by those who claim to know their vegetables to be brimming over with vitamine C or what have you? It is said to possess along with a bevy of vitamines qualities guaranteed to produce pep gumption and what not so the next time you feel the urge to squander two bits for peanuts and red drops put the thought behind you and buy yourself to the nearest vegetable shop and buy a cuke or two in stead It will be your gain in more ways than one for who doesn't know what a wealth of calories are concealed in the innocent looking pea nut

Back in Style

KEEP a thing seven years and and you will have use for it again is an old saying but seemingly a true one Among the articles which have reposed in the attic for several years spurned by those who would be up-to-date are the twin sisters the footstool and pillow If you have either bring them forth Time was when the footstool was used only to hoist very old ladies feet off draughty floors or to be converted into a sort of rumble seat in the buggy or spring wagon when all the children would go riding but now they are classed with the aristocracy in the furniture marts Stools are divided into three classes, the tabouret de duchesse or backless chair the footstool and the hassock which is really a large stuffed pillow The first of the group derives its name from the fact that at the courts of the later French kings no one was allowed to sit in an arm chair in the presence of royalty except royalty itself and only those ladies of very high rank such as duchesses and princesses of the blood were even allowed to sit on stools And the cushions. Where are those works of art the tufted ones made from all colors of silks the ones that took yards and yards of flowers to finish one huge blooming rose and those smart affairs which was the barometer of a girl's popularity the ones made from silk cigar ribbons?

Another Great Mystery Story

FOLLOWING THE ADVENTURESOME "GRAY PHANTOM"

BY HERMAN LANDON

THIRTY-TWO

"What's the matter?" asked Bell [illegible]. "I am only asking how [illegible] that Jack Frey is dead."

[illegible] great effort the lawyer [illegible] head and met Bell's mock- [illegible] His fine, aristocratic face

[illegible] know what's come over [illegible] stammered dazedly. "I felt [illegible] a sudden. Must see my [illegible] as soon as I got back to [illegible] was it you asked, Bell? [illegible] about Jack Frey?"

Bell could answer, Culligore [illegible] and regarded the lawyer [illegible] quizzical expression. "Bell is [illegible]" he declared. "Don't mind [illegible] know that the Gray Phantom [illegible] so his crazy theories [illegible] to a row of pins. I'll bet [illegible] socks that——"

"[illegible] reckless, Culligore,' [illegible] at the door. "You may [illegible]."

[illegible] the three men looked [illegible] door and stared at the [illegible] standing there so calmly, meet- [illegible] startled glances with a smile. [illegible] Gray Phantom.

"[illegible] snakes—it's the Gray [illegible] exclaimed Bell, jumping [illegible] his chair.

"[illegible]—the Gray Phantom!" echoed [illegible] chickly.

[illegible] found no words. He [illegible] stared at the intruder and [illegible] as if he strongly doubted his [illegible] Vanardy tossed aside his rain- [illegible] coming forward with a brisk [illegible] glanced at his watch.

"[illegible] to be late," he murmured [illegible] ally. "Meant to be back be- [illegible] as I promised, but had too [illegible] things to attend to. By the way, [illegible] you will find the car I bor- [illegible] this morning at the crossing [illegible] of Annandale. The back [illegible] was so muddy when I was com- [illegible] this evening that I find it [illegible] and like. There are a few [illegible] holes in the car, but I'll pay [illegible] the damage. Cozy fire!"

Amused at their astonished glances, [illegible] slipped into the chair Bell had [illegible] and stretched out his legs be- [illegible] the flames. He looked tired, but [illegible] was a keen sparkle in his deep- [illegible] eyes as he glanced at their dazed [illegible].

"You seem surprised," he observed. "Didn't I make it clear, Culligore, [illegible] I would return?"

"I called up headquarters on the [illegible] distance this evening, and they [illegible] me you had been pinched."

Vanardy chuckled softly. "Some one [illegible] a ridiculous blunder. The police [illegible] sometimes do, you know."

Culligore winced at the good-natured thrust.

"What's happened to your arm?" asked Bell, noticing that Vanardy carried it in a sling.

"A trifling incident. A gang of ruffians tried to waylay Miss Hardwick and me between here and Annandale this morning. Luckily I was armed and could put up a fight. We had quite a little skirmish. Where is Bowman?"

"He went home after we got word from New York that you had been arrested," Bell told him. "He looked sort of heart-broken. The poor devil had been expecting to cover himself with glory by catching the Gray Phantom."

"His chance will come yet," Culligore pointed out. "He is the proper authority to surrender yourself to, Vanardy. The murder took place inside his jurisdiction. I must telephone him."

"Surrender?" exclaimed Vanardy, looking incredulously at the lieutenant. "You don't think I came back here to surrender myself?"

"What else did you come back for, I'd like to know?"

Vanardy smiled affably. "I came back because I like your company, Culligore, and want to have another little chat with you. Too, I want to spend another night in the blue room. The atmosphere of that room grows on one. Incidentally, I thought you might like to know who murdered Craig and William."

"You needn't tell me that. I know already."

"You think you do, but you are mistaken. By the way, Stanhope, will you ring for one of the servants and order a fire in the blue room? Just a small one to take the chill off."

He walked away, leaving a dazed silence behind him.

"Hold on"! barked Culligore, reaching for his pistol. "You don't think I'm going to let you get away from me again?"

Vanardy turned and fixed him with a humorous glance. "Don't be absurd, Culligore. If I wished to get away, why do you suppose I came back?"

With that he turned and walked to the door. Culligore jerked out his pistol and ordered him to halt. Vanardy flung a glance over his shoulder, laughed as he saw the leveled automatic, and, without a sign of hurry or nervousness, turned the knob and passed out the door and closed it behind him. He chuckled softly as he started up the stairs with final glimpse of Culligore's flabbergasted face lingering in his vision.

The lawyer stared at him for an instant, looked helplessly at Culligore, then did as Vanardy had requested.

"Do you men that you know who committed the murders?" asked Bell.

Vanardy's head went up a little; he seemed to be straining his ears for elusive sounds. The house, shivering occasionally before an onslaught of wind and rain, was full of confused noises.

"I do," said Vanardy. "In the morning I shall tell you the murderer's name. Too sleepy to talk of serious things tonight."

"Oh, come on," said Bell. "It isn't fair to keep us in suspense all night. Can't you see that Stanhope is nervous. He almost threw a fit a while ago when I asked him a simple question."

The lawyer glared at him and moved his hand to his side. "My poor heart can't stand much excitement."

Vanardy regarded him narrowly, noticing that he was pressing his hand to his right side.

"No wonder you have a weak heart," remarked Bell, who had also noticed the peculiar movement. "It's on the wrong side."

Stanhope paled, but drew himself up and ignored the gibe. "I think, Vanardy," he said with dignity, "that whatever information you have should be divulged tonight."

"Not now. Not until I have had another session with the ghost of the blue room. I'll tell you one thing, however. The murders were committed by some one who is at present in this house. Good night."

A servant had just kindled a fire when Vanardy entered the blue room, and sat down in the big armchair Bell had occupied on the night of Craig's murder.

Leaning far back in the chair, he closed his eyes and relaxed. He had spent a trying day, and he fancied that the developments that were still to come would tax all his bodily and mental strength. It was the Gray Phantom's priceless gift to be able to rest whenever he desired and to remove with it all harassing cares from his mind.

Half an hour passed. The room was still save for the ticking of the clock on the mantelpiece and the swishing beat of wind and rain against the windows.

A firm knock sounded on the door, and he got up and opened it. Culligore walked in, gingerly handling his automatic.

"I don't see what your game is, Vanardy," he said curtly, "but I'm not going to let you put anything over."

Vanardy locked and bolted the door and returned to the chair. With some little difficulty, having only one arm at his disposal, he lighted a cigaret. He blew a ring of smoke toward the ceiling.

"You alarm yourself needlessly, Culligore," he said calmly. "As if a one-armed man could put anything over on a sharp-eyed and able-bodied person like yourself."

With a grunt Culligore sat down opposite him, with the table between them, and placed the weapon within easy reach in front of him. "I wouldn't trust you, Vanardy, even if both your arms were on the blink and you didn't have a leg to stand on."

"Thanks for the compliment. Where did you leave Stanhope and Bell?"

"In the library, nagging each other. I told them I was going to bed."

"Splendid, Culligore! Then nobody knows that you are spending the night with me."

The lieutenant gave him a glance of mingled suspicion and bewilderment.

"I hope you didn't telephone Bowman?" said Vanardy after a moment's pause.

"No. I decided it could wait till morning."

"Admirable discretion, Culligore. I'm sure we are going to have a very interesting night. I have a feeling that some one intends to murder me before morning."

"Eh?" The lieutenant sat up a little straighter in his chair.

"I mean just that, Culligore." His lips twisted in a faint, inscrutable smile. "A certain person thinks he will be safer with me dead. You and I may see a bit of excitement tonight. The reason I welcome your society, however, is not with the idea that you are to act as my bodyguard. I want you here merely as a witness. I can take care of myself, even if my left arm is incapacitated."

Culligore compressed his lips in a grim line and looked significantly at the pistol lying before him. "Maybe so. You know what I think, Vanardy. I think you killed Craig and William. I don't know what kind of tricks you are up to, but I'm watching you with both eyes. For a long, long time my fingers have been itching to get hold of the Gray Phantom."

"I know. And the strangest part of it all is that, way down in your heart, you have a sneaking liking for me. You have shown it on several occasions, Culligore. I don't believe you will feel an unmixed triumph if your chance ever comes to put the steel bracelets on me. You will feel just the least bit regretful. Isn't it so?"

"You're talking foolishness," grumbled the lieutenant, looking decidedly uncomfortable. "Anyhow, even if I felt that way about you, I wouldn't let my feelings interfere with my duty."

"Of course not. That's one of the things I like about you. It isn't every man who carries his devotion to duty along with him when he takes a vacation. Such devotion deserves to be rewarded, and your reward will come soon. Before morning you will have captured the murderer of Craig and William. I know you would rather capture the Gray Phantom, but this will be quite a satisfactory consolation prize."

The lieutenant eyed him with a narrow, doubting glance. "You talk big," he remarked dryly. "I'll give you till daylight to make good. If nothing comes along to change my mind in the meantime, I hand you over to Bowman on a double charge of murder."

"Fair enough. Would you mind seeing if the window and the shutters are properly locked?"

Culligore grumbled, but complied.

"Thank you," said Vanardy. "The setting is now exactly as it was the night Craig was murdered. The only difference is in the cast of characters. You are taking Craig's place, and I am taking Bell's."

The lieutenant winced a trifle.

"Don't be alarmed," said Vanardy with a chuckle. "I meant that only in the sense that you are sitting where Craig sat, while I am in the chair Bell occupied that night. I fancy the outcome will be quite different this time."

"Well, I should hope so," mumbled the lieutenant. "That was quite a neat get-away you and Miss Hardwick pulled off this morning. How did you do it?"

"You will see soon enough. It was very simple, though—as simple as passing through a turnstile in the New York subway."

"Except that you didn't have to pay a nickel?"

Vanardy smiled noncommittally.

"Oh, all right," muttered the lieutenant. "Be as mysterious as you like. You gave yourself away, though, when you made that get-away. You demonstrated that you know a way out of this room that nobody else knows."

"Not bad logic, Culligore. I suppose it is useless to tell you that I discovered the way while you were pounding on the door?"

"It sounds pretty thin. Several other people have spent hours looking for a secret exit from this room. You mean to tell me you found it in a few minutes?"

"I did. You see, I had certain advantages that the others lacked. For one thing, one's mind works very quickly in tense moments. You think of things that would never occur to you in a calmer mood. But I hope to convince you before long. Unless I miss my guess, you will soon discover that I am not the only one who knows a secret way in and out of this room. Will that satisfy you?" * * *

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mother Graham Admits Dicky's Short-Comings

I REALIZED the sensations of an insect penned under a microscope when my mother-in-law abruptly ceased the discussion of her engineering of the farmhouse domestic machinery and commenced to analyze my prospective worries in the city, naming Philip Veritzen as the chief of them.

"I'm not blind, you know," she said patiently enjoying my astonished embarrassment. "And I've seen a good many men and women in my long life and studied them carefully. I've been meaning to say something to you about this for a long time, but I kept putting it off. It isn't a particularly easy thing to talk about, you know."

I agreed with her emphatically, and earnestly wished that she had not conceived it to be her duty to discuss Philip Veritzen with me. But I knew that there was nothing for me but to listen as patiently as I might to whatever she meant to say. If Mother Graham once makes up her mind that anything is her duty the stars wait in their courses while she acts upon her conviction.

"Sit down!" she said, indicating a chair behind me, and I obeyed her, wondering whether I was to stand in a corner, or to be sent to bed without my supper.

"In the first place," she began didactically, "just because Richard is my son is no reason why I cannot see his faults. And I realize that he has been much to blame for—the present state of affairs."

I winced with the unpleasantness of having Dicky's mother discuss my relations with him, but I knew that it was impossible to avoid the ordeal. One thing, however, honesty compelled me to say.

"I have been at fault, too, Mother," I said.

She waved my admission aside briefly.

"I haven't seen it. Please do not interrupt me."

She turned a mandatory eye upon me, and I locked my lips gladly. It is much easier to listen to Mother Graham when one is not compelled to answer her.

"Richard is the best boy in the world to me," she went on, her voice vibrant with maternal pride and love, "and I am extremely proud of the place he has made for himself in the world and of his character in general. But ever since he has grown to manhood's estate,"—I bit back a smile at her generous oratorical diction—"I have seen with ever-growing fear that he is much like his father—in some things."

The pride was gone from her voice now. The love remained, but it was tinged with fear. I gripped my hands together, for I guessed something of what was coming.

"I have spoken of this before, Margaret." Her words were halting now, pain filled. "But I cannot let you go without repeating the warning and advice to it. Richard's father was insatiable as water. I—could not keep him—true—to me."

Her face was working, and I longed to hide it against my shoulder and silence the revelation which was so humiliating to her. But I could only sit in silent attention as she hurried on.

"Modern women are not so helpless, so bound by tradition as we were, and you have been more successful with Richard, I do not think he ever has actually been untrue to you, although I know that he has made you suffer. But he was growing very restless, and I believe if you had not taken up your outside work, you would have lost him. He had grown so accustomed to you that he was taking you for granted. But your independent work, especially because you were associated with a brilliant and fascinating man, set him to worrying about you instead of some other woman, and that was good for him."

She had not been looking at me as she talked. But now she turned her eyes directly upon my flaming face.

"I want you to know that I approve of everything you have done so far. You have been most circumspect and handled things wonderfully. But—I can see brookers ahead for you. That man, Veritzen, is so much in love with you that he's going to be hard to manage. You may have to leave your work with him, but if you do I want you to plan for something else which will leave you equally independent of Richard. It is the only way to keep him interested. I am sorry to say."

She drew a deep breath, and rose abruptly.

"There! that's over," she said. "It hasn't been an easy thing to say, but I felt I must warn you. And, Margaret, I want to thank you for all your care of Mary. It will take all your skill to guide her through this ridiculous engagement to this prince, but I'm counting on you. God bless you Margaret, You're been a good daughter to me."

It was a dismissal as well as a benediction, but it was the benison which lingered with me like the fragrance of a flower, during the hours which remained at the farmhouse. Not an pleasant a memory, however, was her warning concerning Phillip Veritzen, one which I had received also from Lillian. It kept me wakeful during the greater part of the night, and sent me to Lillian's room promptly upon the early rising hour we had agreed upon for the journey to the city.

"Why?" I asked inanely. "Do I have to go to New York in the Veritzen limousine?"

If I Were A Man | If I Were A Girl

I WOULDN'T be all the time groaning about my luck.

I wouldn't go around aching about the fact that other fellows were always winning at poker or the races, but I never came out anywhere but at the short end of the deal. If I heard of a man who cleared up five thousand on the stock market, I wouldn't remark in an injured tone, "That guy has all the luck. I wish to heaven I had a break once in a while."

When I sat down to a game of bridge, I wouldn't remark cheerfully to my partner: "Well, are you prepared to lose? I never have any luck, you know." If some other man cut me out with my best girl, I wouldn't announce dismally: "Just my luck!" and a Mack truck lying down.

No girl admires a man who admits himself beaten from the start. Luck is what you make it, and the man who refuses to be tickled is the one she falls for every time.

If you say a thing often enough you're bound to be believed eventually. And nobody loves a jinx!

I WOULDN'T make myself conspicuous.

I wouldn't dress too loudly, talk too loudly or do anything in public to call attention to myself. If I had an irresistible urge to adorn myself in wild colors I'd express it in the privacy of my room and lounge around in vivid orange, flaming crimson or violent purple.

If I felt that life was a sorry thing unless I could whoop at the top of my lungs I'd go off into the woods alone and shout myself hoarse. A man wants the girl he takes out to be admired, and he is flattered to have passers-by look at her because she is pretty or well-dressed. But there's a big difference between a girl being looked at admiringly and stared at because she is conspicuous as a circus parade.

If there's one thing that strikes terror into a man's soul and makes him look hopefully around for a manhole to sink into it's to go out with a girl who has everybody staring at her because of her conspicuous dress, her loud voice or her deafening laughter.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

SATURDAY, and when I woke up and hit Jubilee with the pillow this morning I was happy because it was still quite a ways till tomorrow when my aunt will go over my face and try to make it look like something that it ain't and wasn't ever intended to be. It seemed a long time this morning but it don't seem to be such a long time now. My mother said to me that if I was a good boy and loved my mother I would take a basket and bring her a lot of dewberries and if I brung a whole lot I might maybe get a dewberry cobbler all to myself. A dewberry cobbler is like a dewberry pie only it is made in a deep dish, and when it is hot and gets cream poured over it and sugar put on it there ain't anything better than that. So I took the basket after breakfast and on the way around to the cavant lot to get the cows I went around and you-hooed in front of Younises and her mother came to the door and said she wasn't dressed yet and what did I want. I told her we were going after dewberries, so pretty soon Younies came out with a basket and said she would go an get Maggie and Feeble and meet us at the pasture, so we went ahead. They were a long time coming but we waited for them, because they almost always have some cats in their baskets. But that was the time they didn't.

We all went out to Rocky river because there used to be about a mile of dewberries out there, and we had got our baskets full and on the way home had went in an orchard and got a lot of apple blossoms to put on top of the berries to shade them and look pretty. Then Jubilee backed and we heard another bark and here came a man and a dog, and Feeble and Younies handed us the baskets, and told us to skin out. I told them no gentleman would like out and leave a lady, and Feeble said I wasn't so gentle and for cat's sake to have a little sence. So I took a basket and the Lost Bag of Tripe took one and when we were going over the fence I looked back to see if the man was doing anything to them, and I caught my toe on the fence and took a belly-buster on top of my basket and smashed it and the berries, and then I skun out down the road, and the Lost Bag of Tripe was out of sight, and Feeble said the man acted them if they knew what time it was. My shirt was so covered with berry juice that Feeble told me I ought to wring out my stummick. No dewberry cobbler for me. I hope I catch the Lost Bag of Tripe tomorrow.

STOOD ALONE FIVE YEARS AGO—STANDS ALONE TODAY

DEC 6 1924

"Chrysler came into a seemingly crowded motor car market and almost overnight swept its way into unprecedented acceptance as a quality product. + + Why? Because Chrysler brushed aside outworn traditions in engineering, in design, and in performance. It brought to bear both scientific exactness and artistry. + + That is why Chrysler has taken the country by storm—why it still stands and will long stand alone."

—Advertisement Literary Digest December 6, 1924

CHRYSLER'S PLACE IN THE SUN

Prior to five years ago there were no Chrysler motor cars. In five years, Chrysler, from a standing start, has overtaken leading cars of three, four and five times its age.

The spectacle of a newcomer so swiftly becoming a leader can bring the logical mind to but one conclusion: There must be something remarkable, something altogether different and superior, in the cars that Chrysler builds.

There is a definite superiority in Chrysler cars. Hundreds of thousands of motorists the world over have learned it.

There is in Chrysler performance, a thrilling sense of endless power, a swift eagerness of life and spirit, a restful feeling of perfect balance and positive safety that cannot be experienced except in a Chrysler car. There is in Chrysler design artistic freshness and modern charm. There is in Chrysler riding qualities a smoothness, a cradled restfulness quite without counterpart.

Drive a Chrysler car today and realize, better than words could ever tell you, why Chrysler has won so glittering a place in the sun—and why Chrysler goes on and on to an ever-increasing popularity and prestige.

Flannel as a sea going material is giving way to jersey we have noticed. Regardless of the traditional position of flannel and the cut of this outfit should not be confused with the prevailing beach costumes which go in for loose floppy trousers and gay colors.

Trend of Architecture an Important Subject

What type of architecture is the American home builders to choose? Must he cleave to the colonial house as the only type of residential architecture indigenous to his soil or shall he choose Spanish Swiss Dutch and other foreign adaptations as long as the style of architecture is in agreement with the climate in which the type originated? And what of the ultra modern home design which with its motive simplicity and efficiency is proclaimed a thing of inspired beauty by many and a freak by others?

These are a few of the problems on which the home builder and subdivider must work he is a prophet, if his subdivision project is to have lasting desirability. James S Taylor acting chief of the division of building and housing, United States department of commerce, will address the Home Builders and Subdividers Division in session at the National Association of Real Estate Boards convention at Boston, June 25 to 28, on the new trends in home design.

CUBAN NINE PLAYS MARION SUNDAY

EAGLES WILL FACE HAVANA RED SOX IN FEATURE ATTRACTION

Contest Expected To Draw Largest Crowd of Season to Park

The outstanding baseball clash of the season is the bill offered baseball fans Sunday afternoon at Diamond park when the Havana Red Sox play the Marion Eagles.

The contest, booked for 2:30 p. m., will be preceded by a comedy baseball game by the Cubans, called "the baseball exhibition." The club promises plenty of fun for fans between innings during the contest.

The Cuban club carries 14 players and three of these are American players. The balance of the team is composed of all Cuban stars selected from the Cuban Winter league.

This season the Red Sox took six straight games from the Shreveport (La.) sports of the Shreveport, La., league contenders for the championship honors of the T. O. L. Negro league. The Chattanooga Black Cats broke even with two out of three games to the Cubans.

The Red Sox play rain or shine. A real heavy downpour of rain is the only thing that can stop their daily game, according to their press agent.

The Eagles will have a real job in overpowering this southern team of sluggers. The regular lineup of the local club, which has broken even in two games played, will be started Sunday against the Cubans. Sep Good will be on the mound with Toomire doing the receiving.

The Cuban hurling staff will be formed from "Lefty Grove" Tuna, Elbert Williams, Brown, Dixon and Senda. Pedro Lamuza will do the receiving.

This contest is expected to draw the largest crowd of the season. It will be the only appearance of the Cuban club in this section of the state and fans are expected to attend the game from practically every nearby town.

In addition to having all the earmarks of being a good battle, the game will also bring to Marion one of the outstanding Cuban aggregations.

M'GRAWMEN START SERIES WITH REDS; INDIANS DOWN YANKS

Browns in Lead of American Race After Defeating Athletics

JOHN McGRAW'S Giants, who can be counted upon every year to jump from one end of the National league standing to the other, either from top to bottom or vice-versa, are running true to form again this season. Their sensational spurt of the past two weeks has netted them 11 victories in 13 starts and has carried them from the verge of last place to within 3½ games of the league-leading Pirates.

The McGrawmen today begin a series with the lowly Reds, the only league rival they have not beaten this year. Then comes the important series with the Pirates.

The Cardinals, who dropped three straight games to the New Yorkers, were happy to see them leave St. Louis last night. Karl Hubbell, a native Missourian, turned in his second victory of the week in beating them yesterday, 8 to 1. Civic interest in the champions dropped still closer to the zero mark, only 3,500 fans attending the game.

The Cards dropped into third place below the Cubs who trimmed Brooklyn again, and the runners-up in the American league also exchanged berths. The Browns passed the Yankees by handing the Athletics their worst shellacking of the year, 15 to 6, while the Yanks lost to Cleveland.

Charley Root of the Cubs held Brooklyn to four hits, a homer by Gink Hendrick and three singles in Babe Herman, winning 11 to 2. Johnny Moore, Chicago rookie outfielder, had a perfect day at bat with four hits.

Brooklyn incidentally subleased the league cellar to the Reds, who nosed out the Phillies in the eleventh by a 7-to-6 score.

Ervin Brame, towering Pittsburgh hurler, won a 6 to-2 decision over Ed Brandt of the Braves due to the latter's wildness.

The Browns nicked five Philadelphia pitchers for 18 hits, Manush and O'Rourke leading the attack with four smacks apiece. Manush hammered a homer with the bases loaded.

Cleveland seems to be the nemesis of the Yankees this season, having flimmed the champs four times in five games. They won yesterday by a 7-to-3 count. Dead Pan Eddie Wells, the veteran southpaw who turned in a two-hit game in his last start for the Yanks, was knocked out of the box.

Detroit's heavy-hitting Tigers scored 14 runs in the last three innings to snatch a 17-to-11 batting bee from Washington. Charley Gehringer collected four of Detroit's 23 hits and drove in seven runs.

Friends Blame Soulless Efforts of Yankees to Extract Pound of Flesh From $70,000 Investment For Latest Illness of Babe Ruth

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(Copyright, 1929, by I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, June 8—Babe Ruth is just a well-paid drudge and the New York Yankees a soulless corporation, so bent on exacting its pound of flesh from a $70,000 a year investment that it has made Ruth the sick man he is admitted to be.

Such was the charge brought today by friends of the home run hitter, their claim being that endless exhibition games, in which the club exploited Ruth to the utmost, gave him no rest and so weakened his resistance that he was liable to constant illness and injuries. Indeed, they went further and traced his present illness to a heavy cold contracted because of what they said was callous indifference in insisting that he undertake a long, tiring trip to an exhibition date after playing a recent double header in Washington.

RUTH, they said, was completely fagged after this pair of games on one of the hottest afternoons of the year, yet was routed out early the next day and driven 110 miles in an open bus to the exhibition game at Chambersburg, Pa. They say he got a chill, enroute, and has been a sick man ever since.

Exhibition games, as a rule, are quite a break for the stars. Few of them are required to appear, unless the entire club is traveling and makes the barnstorming stop between points. Even then, they may not be expected to play at all or, if they are, they appear only for a few innings and let it go at that. Not so with Ruth.

"No Ruth; no game."

THIS, tersely, is said to be the story of all exhibition contracts made between the Yankees and the towns visited. Whether he feels like it or not, Ruth must play nine innings of baseball or the club forfeits its guarantee. So far, the club is understood to have been very reliable in this connection.

Exhibition games, of course, are an accepted part of the life that ball players follow and all of them, the best and the worst, must expect to take the rap at one time and another. It simply has been Ruth's misfortune to be so good that he has had to take it at all opportunities, which have been many.

• • •

THEY have been too many, according to the Babe's friends, who say that the Yankees, anxious to make all the money they can out of Ruth before his race is run, play twice as many exhibition dates as any other club in the major leagues. So much for Ruth's friends. They probably overlook the fact that Ruth's love for the game and his willingness to play it at the slightest provocation has contributed as much as anything to the state of affairs they are pleased to deplore. They also ignore the admitted efficacy of the good old wall motto, business is business.

The Yankees, a business firm, are losing thousands of dollars for every day Ruth is out of the lineup. They need him in there, not only for his punch at the plate but for his appeal at the turnstiles. It was so back in 1925, the last time he was seriously ill.

• • •

I SAW him then as he was driven from the hospital of a morning to practice a few half swings at the stadium, later to be bundled up and taken back to his private room. The day I saw him, he practiced for five minutes and then all but collapsed, being dragged to a nearby chair, over which he sprawled in sheer weariness and for minutes thereafter panted and heaved and gasped for breath. Four days later, he was playing right field for the Yankees. That was the year in which later his legs filled with water and his record with pin holes; in fact, it was the last really poor year Ruth has had.

Nobody in particular was to blame; simply everybody in general. Ruth was willing to play. And I never heard the Yankees quoted as having been against it.

THIS time, Ruth's case seems to be out of his own hands and in those of his wife. The Yankee club says he probably will be ready in a week. It may be more like three weeks, for the Yankees do not know too much about the situation. They, in fact, seem to know as little as can possibly be told them.

Up to yesterday, Miller Huggins had not been informed of any of the developments in Ruth's case, although the club was employing the attending physician. He finally got the information he wanted yesterday by dispatching the club trainer with a peremptory request for a report on the case.

BELMONT STAKE TO BE RUN OFF TODAY

Blue Larkspur and Jack High Are Favorites in Classic

NEW YORK, June 8—The sixty-first running of the historic Belmont stakes, oldest and richest of turf classics for three-year-olds, was the magnet that drew thousands of sports lovers to beautiful Belmont park today, the closing day of the meeting.

The race is expected to decide the three-year-old championship of the year despite the fact that Clyde Van Dusen, which captured the Kentucky Derby in a sea of mud, is not in the field. Victory appears to lie between Col. E. R. Bradley's picture horse, Blue Larkspur, the defeated favorite in the derby, and George D. Widener's Jack High.

SIMPSON, BRACEY AND TOLAN TO MEET IN FINALS OF DASHES

Pete Rasmus Sets New Record in Discus Throw at Stagg Field

STAGG FIELD, CHICAGO, June 8—America's swiftest sprinters and runners faced the starter today in the annual national collegiate championships in races that promised thrills if not new records.

Athletes shivered in the chill winds that swept the field on the second day of the contests.

Among the double preliminary qualifiers who awaited the gun in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes were Little Eddie Tolan of Michigan, Claude Bracey of Rice Institute and George Simpson of Ohio State.

Another spectacular race was anticipated in the quarter mile. Pete Bowen, Pittsburgh Olympic star, will oppose Rut Walter of Northwestern.

Forty-seven of the 73 colleges and universities represented by more than 300 athletes have qualified men for today's finals.

Washington and Ohio State headed the list with half a dozen men each. Illinois, Southern California and Chicago qualified five each. Stanford, winner of the eastern collegiate, and Michigan will send four performers each into the finals.

One world's record and two meet records fell in the preliminaries. Pete Rasmus of Ohio State shattered all marks in the discus by hurling the weight 150 feet 1¾ inches. The world's record was 158 feet 1¾ inches, made by Bud Houser of Southern California in 1928.

A minute after Rasmus made his record breaking throw, E. Moeller of Oregon tossed the discus 159 feet 10 inches, but the throw was not allowed because Moeller fouled in stepping out of the circle.

The diminutive Tolan of Michigan won his heat in the 100-yard in :09 5-10. The same time he made in breaking the world's record at the recent western conference games. Simpson of Ohio State tied the Wolverine's time, Bracey of Rice won the opening heat in :09 6-10. Leland of Texas Christian won another preliminary in the same time. The time of Tolan and Simpson broke the national collegiate record set by Bracey last year.

Harlow Rothert of Sanford, defending champion who won the shot put in the eastern collegiate, bettered the national collegiate record by heaving he 16-pound ball 50 feet 3 inches.

Five of the six counties in subdistrict No. 4 of the Legion tournament will have teams entered in the subdistrict play. The subdistrict play is scheduled to start today but as only five teams are entered, the Marion county champs drew the bye and will meet the Kenton Cubs in an exhibition game at Lincoln Park this afternoon.

The Kiwanis nine, runners-up in the Marion county league, will meet the Kenton Mud Hens in the second game of a twin bill this afternoon at Lincoln. The first game will be called at 2 o'clock. The champions of the various counties are as follows: Marion—Eagles; Wyandot—Carey K. of C.; Crawford—Galion American Legion; Morrow—Mt. Gilead American Legion; Union—Magnetic Springs Speedies; Delaware—No team qualified.

The complete schedule for the subdistrict eliminations follows:

Flutes To Be Featured

SPECIAL NUMBERS BY SEXTET

in Sousa Radio Concert

BY MAC L. ROY

CONTINUING his striking demonstrations of the use of all the various instruments of the concert band John Philip Sousa will feature six flute experts from his organization as the outstanding part of the General Motors Family party over the WEAF network at 7 30 o'clock Monday night.

The use of the delicate mellow tones of the flute to provide special color for his own compositions has been characteristic of Sousa ever since he started writing music. In his first famous march 'Semper Fidelis' he makes the flutes and clarinets balance the brilliance and heavier tones of the brasses. In the Stars and Stripes Forever which has become the theme music of the General Motors hour, the use of the piccolo—the smallest instrument in the band—is most striking.

The sextet of flautists—the rather disconcerting way musicians have of spelling the title of the flute players—will present special numbers and in the Sousa compositions and those of the great masters that distinguish the concert the wood wind instruments generally will have special parts to play.

QUESTION SUSPECT

AKRON June 8—Summit county authorities are questioning a suspect in county jail today following the discovery late yesterday of the body of Charles Chandler 45 Stow farmer who had been missing from his home since Memorial day. The body weighed down with heavy stones was found by Deputy Sheriff Bert Karg in the bottom of Cuyahoga river near the Meadowbrook Country club.

Famous Love Stories Of The Operas

Petite Mimi the Tragic Figure of "La Boheme"; Rudolph and Marcel

THE opera La Boheme" with music by Puccini and text by Giacosa and Illica is laid in the Latin Quarter of Paris in 1830. Rudolph a poet Marcel a painter, Colline a philosopher and Schaunard a musician are four typical happy go-lucky Bohemians who live a gay but meager existence in their sparsely furnished attic.

In the room above lives Mimi She is a slight girl frail but graceful with a velvety but white complexion which indicates to everyone that she is not in robust health. She leads a lonely life in her garret room among the housetops and to earn a living makes artificial flowers.

Rudolph is the first one of her neighbors that she meets. She knocks timidly at his door one evening to ask for a light for her candle and the two fall into conversation. Rudolph is immediately charmed with her and they become close friends. Rudolph who has an engagement to meet his friends at the Cafe Momus a restaurant frequented by artists, takes Mimi with him. When they arrive they find themselves in the midst of a very gay party. Marcel has met Musetta a delightful little lady who though enjoying the hospitality of a rich Philistine Alcindoro has become smitten with the young painter.

Sometime later we find Marcel staying at an inn on the Orleans road painting not landscapes but signs for a living. Here Mimi comes to him on a bitter cold morning to tell him that she can no longer endure life with Rudolph. Marcel a sympathetic soul is very much surprised and returns to the inn worrying about his friends only to find that Rudolph has arrived to tell him his version of the story. Rudolph accuses Mimi of flirting and puts the cause of their quarrels entirely upon her. Mimi who has not yet left is eavesdropping but a distressing fit of coughing puts an end to this and brings Marcel and Rudolph out to her. To make the domestic scene complete Musetta appears at this time and in turn accuses Marcel of flirting.

We next find Rudolph and Marcel bereft of their sweethearts living alone. For many weeks they have lived a lonely and melancholy existence. Shaunard and Colline come to call and there is a scene of rather forced gaiety. This is interrupted by the arrival of Musetta who has come to tell them that poor little Mimi is dying and is coming home to them.

The friends leave Rudolph and Mimi alone. Marcel goes to seek a doctor and Colline goes to get delicacies for Mimi.

Rudolph and Mimi left by themselves discuss a future which shall be free from jealousies and quarrels but it is too late for Mimi's end is near. In fact when their friends return they find Rudolph whose grief is pitiful weeping as Mimi breathes her last.

CONVERSATION FROM PLANES VIA RADIO

Columbia System To Offer Unusual Experiment Over Chain Monday Night

NEW YORK, June 8—Two airplanes an orchestra in New York City and speakers in Philadelphia and Washington will figure in a unique radio experiment to be conducted on Monday night by the Columbia Broadcasting Co.

The broadcast which will be transmitted over the nationwide network of the Columbia, is aimed at the perfection of coordination between airplane and ground broadcasting.

Broadcasting from a single plane has been accomplished in the past but the Columbia experiment will mark the first time that a conversation between two planes in flight will be broadcast. It also marks the first time that the key control of an entire broadcasting network will be transferred to the air.

10 0 Clock Marion Time

The technical arrangements for the stunt are decidedly complicated, but they do not involve the use of any new developments in either radio receiving or transmission.

Two planes carrying two announcers of the Columbia system will take off from Hadley field shortly before 11 o'clock eastern daylight saving time. Several minutes later the program will open when an announcer in the studio of station WABC New York introduces the announcer in one of the airplanes. This announcer who will hear himself introduced over a short wave set will then take up the program immediately.

Plane Conversation

He will say a few words regarding the experiment and then will call upon an orchestra leader in a local hotel to render a few selections. When the music is concluded the flying announcer will introduce Capt. Lester B. Seymour who will speak from WOAU in Philadelphia.

Another musical selection from New York will follow Seymour's talk and then Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover will be called upon to speak from Washington.

When Glover walks away from the microphone in Washington a conversation between the occupants of the two circling planes will be broadcast. This broadcast is considered the most difficult feature of the experiment both from an aviation and a radio standpoint.

Mamie Chase (Fritzi Ridgeway) is Eva's cousin and decides she is tired of working for a living so acquires a man, a limousine and an apartment rivaling the Palace of Versailles just as easy as powdering her nose.

Mamie frowns on Eva's romance with her supposed chauffeur asserting that she should get a real live guy.

For the sake of innocents who might believe all this let me say that the day when a pretty girl around Broadway could pick her meal out of the window and shout for a man to come and take her liberty and a limousine has gone the way of other conveniences and wise salesmen. A girl could shout all night this day and be lucky even to catch a cold.

Musical Comedy and Pictures To Be on Programs at Local Theater

BY JACK

Inauguration of a summer policy of tabloid musical comedies and motion pictures is announced today by the management of the Grand theater thus adding one more form of entertainment to the city's amusement program.

So we have the talkies, the silents and stage entertainment—go where one may.

With the inauguration of the summer policy Dan Gutilla, lessee of the theater, also is announcing a new house manager, Frank "Dad" Hall.

Hall indicates that he will book some of the foremost miniature musical shows—miniature only in the form of their entertainment and not in the size of their casts.

Halton Powell's World of Pleasure comes here Sunday from Lima for a week's engagement. Following, the Powell show will come Arthur Hauk's Sunshine Revue. Then perhaps Danny Lunds show will be next. Hauk has been known throughout the tabloid musical comedy world as a producer of clean shows. In addition he has the record of keeping his players with him year after year.

Lund played Cleveland theaters for a number of years.

The Halton Powell show the coming week has more than 40 persons in the cast including a large chorus. Harry Rollins is the comedian supported by Billy Starr, the DeHaven Twins, DeWald and Deering dancers, Jimmy Stone and the Hickville Comedy Four.

The bill will be changed Thursday. The picture for the first half of the week will be "Captain Lash" featuring Victor McLaglen and Claire Windsor.

* * *

SEVERAL weeks ago it seemed likely that Marion would get a circus. Fairly authoritative reports stated that Hagenbeck-Wallace, a favorite here would be here next Monday. Apparently the report was without foundation although the show is playing Ohio dates now being at Wooster (ods).

It will seem unusual not to be able to feed the elephants under the big top this season.

* * *

IT IS probable that Kadgar Grotto will be willing to swear off sponsoring circuses pretty soon.

Last year Bob Morton's show fizzled out before it got to Marion with the local delegation standing on the lot waiting for the show to come while it was stranded some where else.

The aftermath of the Correll circus visit is an affidavit and warrant for the owner of the circus on a $500 check.

Circus sponsorship by local lodges usually isn't such a good way of making money. Circuses like the one here this week are too small to do much business and they usually leave a bad taste in the amusement seekers mouth.

The few people we were able to find who saw the show remarked about the small cast of performers and the general get up of the presentation.

As far as sponsoring circuses lodge organizations might just as well get the big circuses as the one-ring one horse affairs. Toledo Shrine made plenty of money off Sells Floto several weeks ago an Bucyrus and Lima are to have 101 Ranch Wild West in a few weeks on sponsorship basis the Bucyrus park board and the Tiffin American legion doing the promotion in those cities.

Pine Needles Are Found To Be Good Fertilizer

MONT ALTO, Pa.—Experiments conducted by students of the Pennsylvania State Forest school here show that pine needles are an important factor in building up and improving good soils.

It was found that an acre of white pine trees shed 360,293,602 needles during the year, adding five and a half tons of fertilizer to the soil.

"Buy Me a Plane," Now Plea of Wives

NEW YORK—Women in aviation daily becomes a more interesting subject.

Every 24 hours finds reports coming in from all sections of the country telling of women who are planning endurance flights, women who have made their first flights, women who have become pilots, women who are associated with the business end of the flying art and women who are doing everything from joining the ranks of aeronautical mechanics to urging their husbands to buy me that new sport plane.

Woman is equally as far sighted as man. She knows that aviation is one of the coming industries and she wants to have a hand in its development.

Her brothers who have been identified with aviation since the Wright Brothers succeeded in making a maze of canvas and wire struts fly without celestial air should welcome her. Aviation can make excellent use of the keen creative mind of woman.

You never can tell. Some people want their money to go a long way, others won't let it go at all.

Public Utilities Hold Center of Stage In Quiet Market

WALL STREET HEARS COMMISSION RUMORS

New Body Would Supervise Utilities and Consolidation Plans

ATLANTIC REFINING UP

American Waterworks Advances 34 Points in 10-Day Period

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, June 8—Public utility stocks and a few of the oils and specialties held the center of the stage in a quiet and featureless week-end market early today.

Wall Street heard that a movement was on foot in Washington to form another federal commission, similar to the I. C. C., to supervise the utility corporations in all matters, including the consolidation of the big companies and for that reason there would be redoubled efforts to complete the mergers that are hanging fire before such a commission could have its say in the matter.

American Waterworks, the sensation of the week in this department, forged ahead to 125 for a new gain of 2 1-2 points, and an advance of 34 points in the last 10 days. Consolidated Gas was well bought above 111 and public service of New Jersey at 91.

Atlantic Refining was head and shoulders over the balance of the oil stock group, in market activity and buoyancy. A block of 10,000 shares was taken at 70, up about three points from Friday's final price, and the stock then sold about a point below the high record price. Pan American and Standards of New York, New Jersey and California were in good demand.

The forward move in the food stocks took on another lease of life in the second hour, Fleischmann leading with a 2½ point jump to 81¾. The tobacco stocks did not attempt to repeat the brilliant movements of the fore part of the week and most of the motor and steel stocks were under the usual selling pressure resulting from week-end adjustments of speculative accounts. After unusually long dormant period, the railroad equipment shares appear to be attracting some notice, as the result of the increased buying of cars and locomotives by the railroad companies. American Car and Foundry, American Locomotive, Pullman and American Steel Foundries sold about a point higher on the average.

Moderate Reversal in Stock Market

NEW YORK, June 8—The recovery in the wheat market settlement of the reparations question; brilliant production and sales records of American industrial plants and indications of improvement in the credit situation brought about a moderate reversal in the stock market this week, restoring a good part of the losses sustained in the late-May reaction.

The railroad stocks and the public utilities were the logical leaders in the recovery of values this week, and in numerous cases the highest prices of the year were recorded. Steady improvement in railroad and utility business in a period in which little or no attention was paid to the stocks of representative companies, while the industrials and specialties were being boomed to the skies, put these two important classes of stocks "out of line" with the rest of the market.

The most important developments of the week were, as usual, in the money market. Recognition of higher money rates was seen in the decision of the treasury to name a rate of 5½ per cent on the new 9-months' certificates offered for public subscription on Friday, the highest rate for short term government borrowing since 1921. The reserve board and the reserve bank heads made no changes in rediscount rates this week, though some change of policy was seen in the buying of bankers acceptance in the open market by the reserve banks, a policy which if followed far enough will help to take the kinks out of the money market.

COUPLE FINED

Husband and Wife Plead Guilty in Liquor Case

Herbert McGregory and his wife, Mrs. Dora McGregory, received fines when they changed former pleas of "not guilty" to "guilty," when brought before Judge William R. Martin in municipal court this morning for trial. Mr. and Mrs. McGregory are negro residents of Hocking st.

McGregory was fined $100 for alleged illegal possession of intoxicating liquors, while his wife drew a fine of $50 on a charge of interfering with an officer. Their fines were paid.

They were arrested a week ago Thursday night in the rear of their poolroom at 600 Hocking st. by local police.

Mrs. McGregory attempted to destroy the liquor which might be used as evidence when the arrest was made

Girl, 17, Takes Life After Getting Letter

CHICAGO, June 8—Shortly after she received a mysterious letter here today, 17-year-old Mary Pereal hanged herself in the bedroom of her home before her horror-stricken 10 year-old brother, Walter.

The boy managed to cut the body of his sister down while the girl was still breathing but she died shortly afterward.

Catherine Mastic, friend of the girl, told police about the letter. Detectives were unable to find it and it is believed the girl destroyed the communication before she took her life.

Divorces among their friends may continue to be a mystery to many, but they never are to those who get divorced.

EXECUTIVE BOARD CHAIRMAN NAMED

Election Held at Meeting of Marion Railway Clerks' Lodge

Arthur Furstenberger was elected chairman of the executive board of Marion lodge No. 825, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship clerks, at a meeting held last night in Central Labor Union hall. E. H. Gilmore was also made a member of the same board.

One new member was received and one application voted on last night. A report was read from the grand lodge headquarters at Cincinnati, stating that the campaign for 25,000 new members was being conducted in a successful manner and that more than that number have accepted membership.

A withdrawal was issued to Lee B. Stoner, a charter member of Marion lodge, who is taking a position with the National Clothing Co., at Warren, O.

A large number of members reported that they had been in Columbus and Toledo on May 22 and 23 to hear George M. Harrison, grand president, who is on a national speaking tour.

The next meeting of the lodge will be held on Friday, July 5.

TREND OF MARKET VARIES DURING WEEK

Produce Prices Show Tendency To Drop; Meat Slightly Higher

A number of new items made their appearance on Marion markets during the past week, most of them opening at rather high prices, some of them standing at lower levels as the week closed.

Watermelons, which were first offered here a little more than a week ago, were selling at prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.25 each, considerably lower than their opening price, $1.50 each. Cantaloupes, which opened the week at 25 cents each, could be bought for as low as 20 cents as the week closed.

Homegrown strawberries were among other items to reduce prices during the week. Berries closed the week at 12½ cents to 25 cents a quart. The former 30-cent berries, grown in Marion county, were standing at 25 cents, southern Ohio berries could be bought for 19 cents, and other grades were selling between 12½ and 15 cents.

Dewberries were available in limited quantities here this week at 30 cents a quart. These come from South Carolina, growers say. Sour cherries were selling at 20 cents, seedless grapefruit stood at two for 25 cents. Leaf lettuce, formerly standing at 15 cents was selling at 12½ cents a pound as the week closed. New turnips and beets, formerly standing at 10 cents a bunch, can now be bought two bunches for 15 cents.

Butchers report that lunch meats are now by far the most popular type of meat sold as warmer weather gets under way. Steaks formerly selling around 38 cents now bring 40 cents a pound. Butter remained steady all week at 40 cents, while eggs remained steady at 35 cents.

Blackberries appeared on the markets this week at 20 and 30 cents a quart for select berries. Within a few weeks the demand will be cut in half by the appearance of local berries, grocers predict.

SPRINGFIELD, June 8—Thirteen passengers of a large Greyhound bus enroute from Cincinnati to Columbus, which overturned in a ditch along the National highway, near here, last night, today were recounting their narrow escape from death or serious injuries. All were slightly bruised.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

First red raspberries of the year were selling on Marion markets yesterday at 40 cents a pint. They are the very first of the season, coming from North Carolina. This price will probably decline considerably when larger supplies are available.

Sweet corn, commonly known as roasting ears, also made its first appearance here yesterday, selling at eight cents, or two ears for 15 cents. They also will strike much lower price levels as the supply grows.

Homegrown potatoes continued an upward trend yesterday when they went from $1.15 a bushel to $1.25, or 35 cents a peck. Grocers say they will remain at high levels until the new crop is available.

Cantaloupes are down as low as 10 cents now, after starting the season at 25 cents. Present prices range as high as 20 cents. Celery sells two bunches for 25 cents, slightly higher than former quotations. Georgia peaches are still steady at 15 cents a pound or two pounds for 25 cents.

California oranges range in price from 20 to 60 cents, the latter priced fruit being a large juicy orange. Florida oranges range between 25 and 50 cents a dozen.

Missing Girl Is Found with Two Men, Woman

COLUMBUS, June 8—Marcetis Baxter, 14, who disappeared from the home where she was staying here May 28, was found in an apartment in a none-too-fashionable end of town here today in the company of an older woman and two men.

All were taken to city jail for questioning.

The girl's disappearance caused a city-wide search to be conducted and resulted in the arrest of six persons, who were held under heavy bond.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, June 8—A sharply higher opening in grains yesterday was followed by profit taking sales, which caused a reaction. Wheat prices sagged back to the previous close, but other grains maintained much of the early advance. Evening up for the government report due after the close today was in evidence. Wheat prices finished unchanged to 1-8c lower. Corn was 5-8@3-4c higher, oats unchanged to 1-4c up and rye 3-8@1 1-2c higher. Winnipeg wheat prices closed unchanged to 1-2c up and Liverpool 2 1-8@2 1-4d higher.

Wheat Opens Higher

Bullish sentiment continued to run high at the opening and sharply higher prices in wheat were made on general buying. Washington developments were still the principal incentive, and they received impetus from reports of further rains in the Southwest and lack of moisture in the Northwest.

Highest prices were made on the opening upturn, when all the deliveries sold at new highs for the present advance. Profit taking sales through commission houses and by locals brought a steady reaction from the top, with the market closing near the lows. Resting orders and new buying on the dips gave the market steadiness and the decline was orderly, in the nature of a technical reaction.

There was no marked disposition to press the market in the face of pending farm relief action in Washington, although there is considerable bearish sentiment over the cash and crop situation. Damage reports from the Southwest were largely offset by an estimate of prominent grain men that the Kansas yield would total 173,500,000 bu.

Daily export news was colorless, with business in all positions reported small. However, Bradstreet's report shows clearances for the past week simply higher at 10,452,587 bu. compared with 8,947,000 bu a week ago and 5,923,000 bu a year ago.

Domestic forecast is for fair weather Kansas, but rains in other portion of the belt. Canadian probabilities are for fair and generally warmer weather in the three prairie provinces.

Weather Unfavorable

Unfavorable weather conditions, present and forecast, were the incentives to buy corn, and the early strength in wheat was a factor. Locals sold after the opening and there was some reaction, with profit taking in evidence. Commission house and cash interest buying stook the offerings, and prices held relatively well, compared with wheat.

Trade in futures was lighter than for several days. Commercial demand for cash continued good, and local shipping sales totaled 105,000 bu. Receipts were a little larger at 122 cars.

In the cash market wheat was nominally unchanged to 2c higher; corn 1@2c up; oats ½@¾c better; rye dull; and barley steady.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 90; corn, 122; oats, 35; rye, 2, and barley, 4.
